

Scotland 2018

The destination

Scotland is unique!

This holds true for its people, its landscape and even more for its hunting in the „Highlands“, the Scottish upland. The panorama is overwhelming, the scenery breathtaking. Deep valleys, gentle and steep hillsides, high mountains, mumbling streams and rivers, crystal clear lakes.

Solitude and wideness like it is hardly found elsewhere in Europe.

The hunt

Hunting with our Partner “International Big Game & Bird Hunting” in this sublime landscape is probably one of the highlights in every hunter’s life. Even though no Scottish mountain deer has antlers like an average Bulgarian deer, hunting in the Highlands is a special and unforgettable experience for the “proper” hunter. Hunters used to raised blinds admittedly shed drops of sweat with this quite exhausting hunting method. However, when a deer that has been expertly stalked in all weathers in the Highlands lies in the heather, you do not want to exchange it for an 8kg deer effortlessly shot from the raised hide.

Here it is not the size of the wallet determining trophy size, since prices do not depend on trophy size. Instead, physical fitness, hunting skills and a clean shot determine your hunting success here.

In short: In our engineered age, hunting almost like in primeval times is a hunting-wise tremendously satisfying and even for experienced hunters, new and positive experience.

The journey

You can fly to Glasgow or Edinburgh and from there you continue your journey by rental car or you travel with your own car by ferry either from Zeebrügge to Rosyth (Edinburgh) or from Rotterdam to Newcastle.

Accommodation

Depending on the request, you will be accommodated in a small hotel or at an exclusive hotel or castle.

For groups or individual clients a farmed house can be booked exclusively, where you can also book a cook.

THE ISLE OF RUM

The hunt

The island of Rum is one of a group known as the Inner Hebrides and lies off the West Coast of Scotland in an area of outstanding natural beauty. Volcanic activity and glacial erosion have created stunning landscapes.

The island was designated a National Nature Reserve in 1957 and has an abundance of wildlife. It exceeds 100 square kilometers'. Hunting here is a unique experience. Retrieval is mostly by pony backed up by Argo hill machines.

Red deer stalking on Rum is an unforgettable experience. The views are stunning. Terrain is mixed with both low and high ground giving access to hunters of all abilities. It is a true wilderness and the animals thrive here. Stalking is available for single hunters and groups. There are two Professional Hunters and each one can take out two hunters per day. Observers can accompany the Ghillies and remain out of sight until success has been achieved. Non-hunters can also go fishing in the 6 lochs or two small rivers for brown trout and occasional sea trout.

Rum from Muck

The journey

The journey to Rum takes you through some of the most scenic parts of Scotland. The ferry leaves from the mainland port of Mallaig at the end of the famous "Road to the Isles" from Fort William. The crossing takes 80 minute to reach the island.

The Ferry "Loch Nevis" with Rum Beyond

Accommodation Two options for accommodation exist on the island; There is a very comfortable Guest House called Ivy Cottage which has well-appointed en suite rooms. Full board is available and meals are taken in the large conservatory which has a fantastic view of the bay.

Rooms are also available in a new Bunkhouse on a self-catering or fully-catered basis. This has a comfortable lounge area with wood-burning stove.
