GENERAL TRAVEL INFORMATION

CURRENCY

Namibia Dollar (NAD) / Cent

TIME DIFFERENCE

CET +1 hour (end of March to end of September), CET -1 hour (end of October to start of March),
CET (end of September to end of October and start of March to end of March)

CLIMATE

It is very hot from October to January. The winter months (May - September) are pleasantly warm during the day (daytime temperatures of 20-25°C), but it may be frosty at night. May and June are the best times to travel. It is best to visit Skeleton Coast National Park between June and October, Sossusvlei and the Etosha Pan from March to May.

ELECTRICITY

220/240 volt, 50 hertz alternating current
Three-pin plug sockets (adapter required).

ENTRY REQUIREMENTS

Please note the entry requirements for the respective country. Information can be obtained at the responsible consulate. In case a visa is needed, please be advised, that the acquisition is your own responsibility.

Entry requirements when traveling with children (under 18)

When you check in for your flight in Europe, you will need to present an international birth certificate.

Passport

German and Austrian citizens should hold a passport valid for a minimum period of 6 months from the date of entry into the country.

Importing and exporting trophies

Please note that EU provisions on importing and exporting trophies may have changed since you last traveled. Since May 01, 2011, trophies are no longer allowed to be transported in luggage. If the hunter insists on transporting boar tusks, etc. in their luggage, they do so at their own risk. Please note the respective rules in your country if you are not an EU resident.

HEALTH

Hospitals

Medical care in Namibia's cities is good – especially in the capital city Windhoek, where patients can be looked after at several private clinics that would satisfy European standards. But in many smaller, remote locations, you will either find a basic hospital or a first-aid station. They are listed in the telephone directory under 'Emergency services' on the first page for each locality.

You can find doctors under 'Classified medical listings' on the orange pages in the telephone directory. The German embassy in Windhoek has a list of doctors who speak German. [Please contact your respective embassy for information on doctors who speak your language.] Our camp manager can also be of help here. As the country is so sparsely populated and there are huge distances between localities, you should always be aware that the nearest doctor or hospital may be a day's journey away.

Vaccination requirements

A valid yellow fever vaccination certificate is required for all travelers aged 1 or over if arriving from countries with risk of yellow fever transmission. This is not necessary if arriving from Germany. All travelers need to show proof that they have been vaccinated against polio or have a booster if necessary (in Germany, the vaccination is an injection with all three types).

The Health Service of the Foreign Office further recommends vaccination protection against tetanus, diphtheria and hepatitis A, for long-term stays over 4 weeks or special exposure additionally hepatitis B, rabies, typhoid and meningococcal disease (quadruple vaccine).

The standard vaccinations for children and adults recommended by the Robert Koch Institute (see <https://www.rki.de/EN/>) should be up to date. Please refer to the vaccination authority in your country for precise information.

Please note the changes in vaccination requirements for travelers via Johannesburg, South Africa on OUT-BOUND and above all RETURN FLIGHTS (which came into force on 6/6/2011):

Because of the current development mentioned above, we RECOMMEND (it is not currently law, but you should take it into consideration) travelers have yellow fever vaccinations if visiting the following countries in southern Africa: Mozambique, Zimbabwe, Botswana

Malaria

There is a high risk of contracting the disease all year round along the Kavango and Kunene rivers as well as in the Caprivi Strip.

There is a medium risk (higher during the rainy season, lower in the dry season) in the north and northeast of the country with the regions of Omusati, Oshana (eastern Ovamboland), Ohangwena, Oshikoto (northern Etosha Pan) as well as in the northeastern parts of the Otjozondjupa and Omaheke regions.

There is a low risk in the adjacent parts of the country heading towards the south.

Malaria is transmitted when you are bitten by the nocturnal blood-sucking Anopheles mosquito. If left untreated, it can often be deadly to Europeans who are not immune to it, especially if the dangerous malaria tropica is contracted. The disease can also break out weeks or even months after your stay. If you develop a fever during this time, you must tell the doctor treating you that you have visited a region where malaria is prevalent. Courses of malaria treatment are available on the market in Germany in the form of various prescription drugs (e.g. Malarone, Doxycycline, Lariam). [Please note the respective vaccination treatments for your home country.] The choice and personal suitability as well as side effects and/or incompatibility with other medications must be discussed with a doctor specializing in tropical or travel medicine before chemoprophylactic drugs are taken.

Due to the risks of being infected by mosquitoes, we recommend that all travelers:

- wear clothes that cover the body (long trousers and long shirts),
- repeatedly apply insect repellent on all exposed body parts in the evening and at night
- sleep under a mosquito net, if necessary

There are other illnesses and diseases that can only be prevented by protecting yourself against mosquitoes.

Diarrhea and cholera

Most diarrheal diseases, cholera in particular, can be avoided with appropriate food and drinking-water hygiene. Only drink water from a safe source, for example bottled water. Never drink tap water. In an emergency, you can use filtered, disinfected or boiled water. When traveling, you must also use drinking water to wash dishes and clean your teeth. When it comes to food: Boil it, peel it or disinfect it. You must keep flies away from your food. Wash your hands with soap as often as you can, but always after bowel movements, before preparing food, and before eating.

Other health risks

UV radiation is very high in Namibia. To protect your skin and eyes, sun protection such as clothing that covers the body, hats, sunglasses, and sunscreen must be worn.

Before you travel, seek advice from a clinic or doctor specializing in tropical medicine (for example, in Germany: <http://www.dtg.org/> or <http://www.frm-web.de>). Please seek medical advice from the relevant institution in your home country.

In addition to our general exclusion of liability, please note the following important information:

No liability can be assumed for the accuracy or completeness of the medical information or for any damages or losses that may occur. You remain responsible for your own health.

These statements from trained medical professionals are for informational purposes only. They are not a replacement for consulting a doctor. They are specific to direct travel from Germany and longer stays in the destination. The information may deviate for shorter trips, entry from other countries, and travel to other parts of the country. This information must not be used for the traveler's individual circumstances independent of the safari. You must seek in-depth medical advice from a doctor specialized in tropical medicine prior to travel. Please note the respective medical advice for your home country.

INSURANCE

Taking out travel insurance in case you fall ill or require ambulance services is recommended.

HUNT CAPRIVI

For hunters who want to hunt big game, we have good hunting opportunities to some of the best areas in the Caprivi Strip. Hunting concessions are carefully selected based on animal movements during the season in combination with quota availability. This optimizes the chances for hunters to fulfill their hunting dreams.

Hunting camps in the Caprivi are usually located along rivers or embedded in the natural environment. Accommodation is in comfortable, luxury tents with en-suite bathrooms and hot showers. Guests can expect well-prepared meals and good service. Spending the evening around the campfire after a hard day's hunting listening to the symphony of nature is a truly unique experience.

HUNTING AREA AND LODGE

Bwabwata National Park is about 280,000 ha, on the Okavango River at the beginning of the Okavango Delta on the Namibian side. To the north lies Angola and to the south Botswana.
